

The truth behind Zuckerberg: how Reptilians invaded the Online Realm

Analysis by Buford O'Bill

Mark Zuckerberg, head of Facebook and inventor of many algorithms, is a Reptilian humanoid and a Soul Soldier of Gwodnoil.

Birth

Mark Zuckerberg has never detailed exactly when he was born or how. This may seem 'normal' or "nit-picky", but it is not. When you actually look into the dates and compare facts, it all becomes hilariously obvious what is happening.

"When I was in college I did a lot of stupid things and I don't want to make an excuse for that. Some of the things that people accuse me of are true, some of them aren't."

Stupid things such as hatching from an egg, Mark?

Also, let's read that again.

'Some of the things that people accuse me of are true, some of them aren't.'

Why would a billionaire half-reptilian humanoid elite soldier of Gwodnoil feel the need to say that as a way to make sure he wouldn't get sued?

According to a private source, Mark Zuckerberg does not have a birth certificate. Instead, he claimed to "not need one for this world". Many "normys" will alledge this is just a funny 'joke', but let's assess what was actually said and where:

when he said this in 2004, he was doing a charity do for the Princeton Plainsboro Teaching Hospital, raising money alongside the Dean of Medicine after an Echovirus 11 outbreak.

23yr old volunteer photographer, Jerry 'Bingo' Irving, joked "you should sell Mark [Zuckerberg]'s birth certificate", to which Zuckerberg replied, 'you can try, but I have no need for one in this world'. My good friend Dell even caught it on tape.

After sending a few emails to Jerry Bingo, I finally got a reply back.

"Hi Buford,

yeah, I remember the joke. Everyone found it pretty fun. As far as I know, Mark was just in a silly mood that day. Come to think of it, I think everyone was – especially since a real life celeb Bill Gates type guy was in front of us. We just had to impress y'know? Anyway you ask about the joke's validity. Yes, I can clarify I did make that joke and Mark said he doesn't need a birth cert. If you need anything for photography, such as weddings or whatnot, do let me know.

Regards,

Jerry 'Bingo King' Irving

prints are now 20% off this halloween at:"

Easily offended

Like a little birdy, Zuckerberg likes to tweet, tweet, tweet. Didn't his parents ever tell him we have two ears and only one mouth for a reason? Well, anyways, around March 2018, he posted – then quickly removed – one saying:

“Jokes are a great way for humans to put aside differences and make a peaceful future. But sometimes, they have the opposite effect. Calling groups ‘lazy’, ‘robots’, ‘reptiles’ or other racist remarks may be intended as harmless fun, but have an unforeseen impact on recipients.”

I've called many a folk lazy, but reptilian or robotic? Seems a little too close to home for one guy...

“Confronted with “robot” memes about his facial expressions or mannerisms (especially stemming from a congressional hearing), he responded with humour — saying that the setting of a Senate hearing “is not exactly an environment that is set up to accentuate the humanity of the subject.”

again, what's with the 'lawyer-speak?' I find it interesting how he completely dodged the question, rather than joke and then say 'no, I am in fact not a robot/reptile/working for Gwodnoil.'

Heatlamps

Why is Zuckerberg finding anti-robotic/anti-reptilian memes offensive and also why does he always appear under sunlamps, going as far as to request a sunlamp be placed into the Supreme Court when he appeared for the Cambridge Analytica trial?

Take a look at any video he appears in. notice how the camera always focuses on his head, just out of sight of the lamp above his head? Normal people aren't self conscious about such a thing. And he's not going bald, so why would he ask this of the camera man?

His “signature” plain grey T-shirts are reportedly custom-ordered from Brunello Cucinelli and cost in the range of US $300–$400 each.

The question is, what are they made out of? If it's just plain cotton, it's not gonna cost that much. My great-great-great granpappy (try saying that three times fast) was interested in the textile trade and prices were no where near that.

Buford, why are you bringing up 't-shirts'?

What if I was to propose they aren't cotton. What if they were a new material engineered to conserve as much heat as possible?

We've all seen how lizards die in the freezer, so we know if Mark was a reptilian, he would want to stay warm 24/7.

just something to think about.

Conclusion

If you think your kids aren't at risk of Gwodnoilian trickery and mind control, yet they're on Facebook and Tick tock every day, think again. Would you let a random lizard babysit your newborn? How about a Humvee? Then why are you letting this 'hi-tech', 't-shirt' wearing weirdo anywhere near them or yourself? America may be the land of the free, but it slowly is becoming not, thanks to Gwodnoil's influence. Why do you think 'Influencer' as a term is sprouting up?

For one thing, I'd like to convince you straight from the Horse's mouth:

“They trust me — dumb fs.”

For more info on the reality of our being, head to the Mokwhen's UFO Church of the USA.